About This Game

"Behind the Memory" is a mystery first-person exploration game set in a deserted world. You play as a man named Hector, who returns home after several years trying to escape his past. Every step will submerge you in a journey to discover Hector's darkest secrets as he gets closer to the place that haunts him...

A cinematic experience

"Behind the Memory" is a game focused on exploration with a huge presence of suspense and inner narrative thoughts. It takes the "walking-simulator" genre and pushes it a step further, by mixing it with an emotional story and cinematic aesthetics, that trap the player straight into the story. The aim of the game is not only to explore your surroundings, but to use the information gathered from exploration to reconstruct the past events that shaped the characters in the story, as the plot advances on real time, leading the player to the final climax. It is a well acted and carefully designed story of love, trust and forgiveness that takes about one to one and a half hour to complete, depending on how thoroughly the player explores.

I don't mind walk simulators or even very short ones, if they are good, but this one is not.

Besides the contrived story that a 12 year old could come up with and write, there are also technical issues with the game that there is no excuse for. For example, there is no in-game support option for 4k, even though Unreal engine definitely supports this, thus is simply a matter that the ""devs"" did not allow to be selected.
